FOOD VALUE is the ARGUMENT for the BIG LOAF of HOLSUM

Of two loaves of bread that look alike, one may have twice the food value of the other.

Get away from the old idea that "bread is bread."

The following facts are worth thinking about:

FLOUR QUALITY. Any miller will tell you that the price of flour varies nearly $2 per barrel between the cheapest and the best grades. This is due to the actual difference in food value and quality. There can be as much difference between two grades of wheat as between a pure-bred Guernsey bull and a common hybrid.

MILK is another consideration. One bread may contain milk averaging high in butter-fat, while another may contain no milk at all. Butter is the only fat known which possesses shortening value and also contains vitamins in sufficient degree to promote growth and sturdiness in children.

Or take SALT. Even this common ingredient of bread ranges between $15 and $40 per ton, according to its quality and purity.

Similar comparisons might be made of every ingredient used in bread. HOLSUM Bread is made of the best ingredients the market affords. Everyone of these ingredients is subjected to chemical analysis before we buy.

Why HOLSUM Is Made In Large Loaves Only

Again, HOLSUM is baked in large loaves only. Large loaves are more economical and better. They have less crust in proportion, are of the right weight to secure the best texture, stay fresh longer, and are of finer flavor.

There is one more important fact about HOLSUM. That fact is cleanliness. We provide shower baths and clean linen for our employes, and take every known precaution to insure bread that is of absolute purity and cleanliness.

HOLSUM is offered the discriminating housewife who wants the best. Try HOLSUM in your home. HOLSUM will prove to you that all bread is not alike.
